3. Methodology

This chapter provides an outline of the research methodology used to answer the research questions - the research approach, a description of primary data collection process for the interviews, secondary research, data analysis techniques used and limitations of the adopted research method.

3.1 Research approach

The research approach influences design and provides an opportunity to consider benefits and limitations of various approaches available to the researcher (Creswell 2003). Two types of approaches are available - deductive and inductive. Deductive approach tests theories, while an inductive approach forms theories (Marcouides 1998). This report uses inductive research approach as it aims to formulate hypothesis and develop general theory around how organisations could go about marketing digital products, especially viral marketing, using social media.

There are two methods available for data analysis - Qualitative and Quantitative. Qualitative research is "a research strategy that usually emphasises words rather than quantification in the collection and analysis of data" (Bryman & Burgess 2007), while quantitative research is based on data analysis to generate reliability. Qualitative research better reflects "the quality of the lived experience of individuals, which cannot be reduced to numerical values using statistical analysis" (Hewitt-Taylor 2001). Social media is a dynamic field which is continuously changing. This means that although quantitative analysis would provide data, designing an appropriate survey to get qualified opinions and understand the deeper issues in this area was quite challenging (Amarasinga et al. 2002).

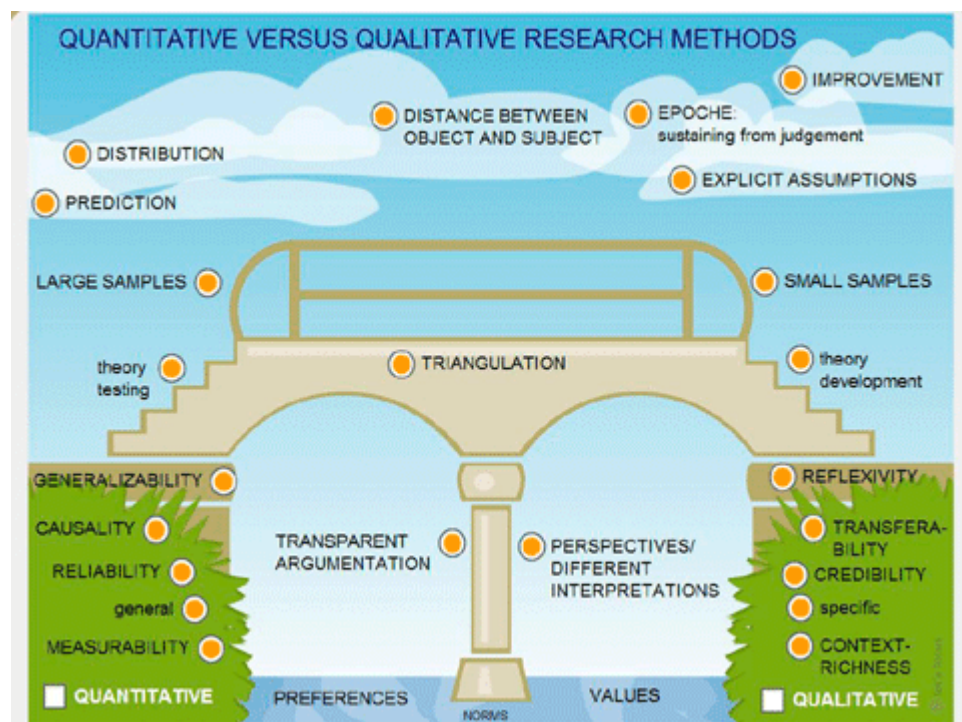

This report uses the qualitative method to explore the research questions as it allows researchers to conduct in-depth explorations of a particular phenomenon (Creswell 2003).
