STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

Masters in Engineering

I remember my Psychology class about a subject where they say that a male kid imitate his male guardian while they grow up, thus making them copy or imitate their actions and becomes their point of reference as they mature. Maybe this notion is right. From my father's favorite foods, games and even his leisure, I have acquired all of it – something that I cannot explain until that particular class. But taking up Engineering in my undergraduate course comes from a deeper cause, not only because my father was someone I look up to, but the inner calling that I have seen in becoming a full-pledged engineer.

My motivation started when I was in high school. Coming from a remote barrio in town, I have been used to walking a few kilometers from our house to the terminal on my way to school. The problem is that, when heavy rains occur, the road becomes dangerous to motorcycle vehicles. The asphalt road seems akin to a ruffied design of a reefer house. I felt that if I were the engineer, I could have done it better. Calculating the slopes and the canals surrounding the pavements are far from safety, and so I assume that the three major accidents in that particular area can be associated to the poor engineering of that road. My father particularly pointed out his plans about it and we have had beautiful conversations about engineering concepts that can make it better.

But a devastating occurrence in my life is when he left me with such plans alone – he was stricken by a stroke and is now disabled. Having the strong passion with engineering and the inspiration he has caused in my life, I plan to pursue a higher level of education in order to achieve my goals – to land a job at the local government unit's engineering department to resolve problems of road safety and some other infrastructures. I can see that the XX University specializes in molding students with this discipline, by treating its students like their own children, thus, I look forward to work with you and be part of the family.
